

Hello! My name is Daniel Loumeau and I'm from Long Island, New York. Outside academics, I love playing soccer, spending time with friends, and watching movies. I would really like to travel, so hopefully I get the opportunity to study abroad while in college. At school, I'm involved in the event planning committee for Best Buddies, a club that promotes community between students and people with intellectual disabilities. Last semester I took classes on the premed track but am now looking to explore other options. I was briefly introduced to coding/python over winter break by my brother and that led me to take this class. Looking forward to starting the semester!
